FULTON BRIDGE KEEPER SHOT

Here and There

THE real challenge of a crime wave is never brought home to the average man until a friend, a neighbor, the breadwinner of a local family, is shot down in cold blood at his post of duty.

The murder of Glenn L. Williams, early Saturday while keeping his lonely vigil on the Fulton state toll bridge is the most brutal and cowardly crime in the recent history of Hempstead county.

Not three days ago Walter Billings was shot to death in his own back yard in this city.

Assassination becomes a mere matter of mathematical averages, if the crime wave is to go on unchecked; and no man knows when he will be next.

There are two courses open to citizen.

One is the rule of the rope, by which the pioneers cleared the plains of human vermin when there was no constitutional authority.

The other is the courts.

There is no remedy in lynch law today. Population is too great—too great the chance of the real criminal "planting" incriminating evidence on some innocent man.

Our sole safety lies in the rigorous administration of justice by the courts. And to this end the courts must have the support of every citizen.

The courts in times past have not had this support.

Prosecution was lax.

Judges countenanced perjury.

Law-abiding citizens dodged jury duty and shrank with horror from the witness stand. Any man who has evidence in a criminal case anywhere ought to testify—and if he fails to do so, he should be exposed to the contempt of his fellow citizens.

This is a time when Law and Order says to the common citizen:

"You must declare yourself—either you are for me or against me."

X X X

The shirked duty of a prosecutor, judge, jurymen or witness anywhere in this world accounts for a brutal murder somewhere else.

It will probably appear that the slayer of Glenn L. Williams is some desperado who has bluffed his way past citizens and juries in other communities—and because he was not cut down, because common citizens were weak and whining and cowardly, because of this, Glenn Williams is dead.

An American Girl Sees Mexicans in Battle on Border

McMath Writes of Mrs. Owen P. Lindsay, Formerly of Stephens, Ark.

JUMPED INTO FIGHT

When Mexican Shot Down Horses, Sergeant Shot Down Mexican

Editor's Note: This is the fourth of a series of twelve letters written by Sam McMath, former Hope man, regarding Mexican border events, to S. G. Norton of this city.

Dear Mr. Norton:

Lady Luck was a friend indeed when she directed me to a rooming and boarding house, owned and operated by Mrs. Owen P. Lindsay, at Del Rio, Texas. I had been there just a short time when Mrs. Lindsay and I discovered to our mutual astonishment, that we had known each other during our childhood days at Stephens, Arkansas.

My recollections of her were very vague, but I remember her brother, Paul Edwards, very well. Paul and I attended school at the same time. He was in the advanced grades while I was in the primary department. He was one of my boyish heroes because he was such a good baseball player. And by a strange twist of fate, he was again destined to play the role of hero in my estimation 25 years later.

My parents left Stephens in 1893. The Edwards family left two years later and moved to south central Texas where they engaged in the cattle business. Mrs. Lindsay grew up a typical ranch girl, fearless and self-reliant. She was still a daredevil when I knew her at Del Rio.

One day when Mexican revolutionists were staging one of their periodic battles at Villa Acuna, the little Mexican town across the Rio Grande from Del Rio, Mrs. Lindsay went down to see the scrap. Her husband managed to get through the cordon of guards I do not know; but she could always find things no other person would dare attempt.

The Mexicans had been warned that if they shot into Texas territory our forces would intervene. Cavalry and infantry were employed along the river ready for quick action and they were fairly itching for an excuse to mix in the fray.

Horses are Slain

Mrs. Lindsay and a cavalry sergeant were chatting when they saw two panicky-stricken horses emerge from a melee, a Mexican soldier in pursuit. When the horses reached the Rio Grande, they plunged in and headed for the Texas side. The Mexican deliberately shot the poor beasts as they floundered in the water. That was too much for the American cavalrymen who loved a horse like a brother. Turning to Mrs. Lindsay, he said, "If you'll hold my horse I'll get that spike." Mrs. Lindsay grabbed the bridle reins. The sergeant dropped to his knees and his rifle barked. The Mexican slumped down and lay quivering in the sand while his soul departed for its Valhalla.

In relating the incident to me, Mrs. Lindsay seemed to have but one regret—that she herself hadn't been permitted to do the shooting. She loves horses too.

A few days after this battle two young men from Del Rio got permission from Mexican officials to spend a day fishing on the San Diego, a beautiful little river about 25 miles south of Villa Acuna. When the boys returned that afternoon they saw the bodies of 12 Mexicans hanging from the limbs of a giant cottonwood in the outskirts of the village. The poor devils had been taken prisoner during the battle and executed by hanging in order to conserve a dwindling ammunition supply.

A Real Adventurer

Paul Edwards is a real soldier of fortune. Excitement and adventure are as necessary to him as food and water. During his interesting career he has been a cowboy, ranchman, speculator and soldier. When the Carranza-Huerta revolution broke loose, he enlisted with the Carranzistas, was commissioned captain, and scrapped all the way from Villa Acuna to Mexico City. During the long hard campaign there were days when Paul and his brother officers had to subsist on

Troops Rush Out of Barracks and Overwhelm Sofia

Guerorguieff Heads New Balkan "Authority Government"

PARTY RULE FAILS

Military Leaders Execute a Coup d'Etat Throughout Nation

SOFIA, Bulgaria.—(AP)—A coup d'etat Saturday established a military dictatorship in Bulgaria as the climax to a cabinet crisis.

Shortly before dawn troops rushed from the Sofia barracks, occupied public buildings and took up positions at all strategic points in the capital.

Simultaneously, troops in the provincial cities executed similar maneuvers.

Members of the outgoing cabinet were arrested and kept under heavy guard. King Boris issued a decree dissolving parliament and approved the nomination of Kimon Guerorguieff as premier, and his new cabinet.

Before noon the king had signed 30 decrees, and immediately afterward the new government issued a manifesto announcing the creation of an "authority government" independent of political passions.

The manifesto issued to the nation attributed the change of government to the failure of the party government system.

Truck Strike Cuts Off Food Supply

Shortage Is Serious in Minneapolis and St. Paul

By the Associated Press

Shortage of food, gasoline and other necessities neared an acute stage in St. Paul and Minneapolis Friday night as 6,200 striking truck drivers tightened their picket lines. Gasoline stations were stoned and their pumps wrecked. Bakers closed for want of deliveries, truck gardeners, grocers and other shippers hampered by an almost complete halting of motor transportation in the twin cities.

Scores of deputies were assigned to keep order, 81 persons were arrested, and an appeal was made to the postmaster-general at Washington after the strikers stopped a truck load of gasoline destined for the Minneapolis post-office. Beer deliveries stopped during the day, and laundry and dry cleaning drivers announced they would join the walkout.

Gov. Floyd R. Olson called a conference to mediate. The strikers demanded union recognition, closed shop and wage adjustments.

Agitation for a two-hour general strike at Cincinnati May 22, was started in leaflets bearing the signature of the "Steel and Metal Workers Industrial Union," asking support of striking employees of the Formica Insulation Company.

Explosion of three harmless bombs in two nights at East Thomas, Ala., Republic Steel Corporation village, resulted in a barricade of roads entering the town Friday. Company officials said they were determined to stop "dynamiting terrorism." Furnace employees have been striking for several weeks.

Great Lakes tug crews at Buffalo, Cleveland and other Ohio ports were idle, hampering ship movements, and a general strike at Toledo was under consideration. An eight-day strike of clay workers in Tuscarawas county, Ohio, was ended by federal mediation.

At Philadelphia the S. S. Flomar became the eighth ship of the Calmar fleet to be tied up by a sailor's strike. It was docked with its load of steel consigned for the new San Francisco bay bridge.

A Des Moines packing house strike was ended after four days, 700 workers going back to their jobs.

Child Is Unable to Identify Suspects

June Robles Fails to Recognize Two Men Held by Officers

TUSCON, Ariz.—(AP)—Two unnamed suspects in the kidnapping of June Robles were detained by authorities Friday for questioning Friday, despite failure of the six year-old girl to identify either.

One of the men, taken into custody this morning, had been sought since June was found last Monday entombed in a sheet iron box buried in the desert. Officers described him as the "most promising" suspect they had rounded up.

The other man, who had been questioned and released Thursday when June could not establish his identity, was brought in again for further questioning.

Officers said they would continue examining the man confronted Friday by the girl, in an effort to check up on circumstantial evidence indicating he might have participated in the case without having been seen by his little victim.

EL DORADO, Ark.—(AP)—Three persons were reported to have been drowned when a boat carrying a party of six overturned in Grand Marc lake, a fishing resort about 35 miles southwest of here, early Saturday.

The Calloways had no children, but Gragg was married and had two children.

Walter Hartley Killed on Arkansas-Missouri State Line

SPRINGFIELD, Mo.—(AP)—Shot four times in three different affrays Friday officers, Walter Hartley, 35, notorious bank robber who escaped from the Ozark county jail at Gainesville died Friday as he was being taken to Gainesville following his capture near a hideout just over the Arkansas line in Marion county.

The district where the shootings took place is heavily wooded and miles from any communication line.

Surprised early Friday at the home of Curtis Ingram, south of Duginsville, Hartley was shot in the neck and shoulder by Highway Patrolmen Nathan Massey and Ben Graham and Sheriff S. W. Daniel of Ozark county. He fell to the steps, apparently dead.

Graham and Ellison left to get their cars, and while they were gone, Hartley revived. He seized two of the officers' shotguns, fired 10 shots as he fled into the thick underbrush. He missed every time.

Massey and Sheriff Daniel returned his shots and one of them hit him in the arm, but he passed out of sight. Help from Gainesville arrived and the men searched the nearby woods.

Patrolmen Graham and Massey discovered Hartley and one of their shots wounded him. They started to Gainesville with him, but he died en route, about 45 minutes after the last encounter.

Originally from Mountain Grove, he served part of a seven-year sentence once for robbing the bank of Cabool. In 1932, he was convicted of robbing the bank of Highlandville, and released under appeal bond, according to highway patrol records. The case was to come up again soon.

State's Employees Gave to Campaign

Audit Commission Reports $15,000 Swap of Notes for Warrants

LITTLE ROCK—Eight employees of the state highway department contributed $15,000 to the campaign fund of Dwight H. Blackwood, former chairman of the commission, who was a candidate for governor in 1932, in the form of promissory notes which were paid in September, 1932, with back salary warrants, it was revealed in the testimony made public by the State Highway Commission Friday.

The notes ranged in amounts from $100 to $440, and without exception, equalled the reduction in salary of each employee for May, June, July and August. The reductions were made after the legislature at a special session in April 1932, limited administrative expenses of the Highway Department to $3,333.33 a month and directed that highway funds, with certain exceptions, be impounded until September 1 to meet bond and interest maturities.

Testimony of former Highway Department employees who were retained by the new commission was to the effect that the late Victor A. Kleiber, chief clerk and auditor under the old Highway Commission, suggested that employees be asked to sign notes for contributions.

The four months' pay cut was restored September 1, 1932, in the form of back salary warrants, which the employees who had signed notes endorsed and turned over to the Highway Department cashier, receiving in turn their campaign fund notes.

Several witnesses testified that they were given to understand that they would not have to pay any cash out of their pockets to meet the notes, but that after September 1, 1932, they would receive salary increases equivalent to the reductions made in May and that the increase would take care of the notes by December 31.

Only one witness said he understood that the notes were to be paid with back salary warrants.

Several witnesses testified that they were not asked to contribute to the campaign fund, that they did not sign notes that they did not receive any back salary warrants and that their salaries were not raised September 1.

Col. John R. Fordyce, chairman of the Audit Commission who questioned 12 or 15 witnesses during the past week assisted by Paul E. Gutenson, legal adviser to the commission, said minutes of the Highway Commission

Elephant Touted as New "Savior" in New York State Rally

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—An investigation to determine whether the Department of Justice is "attempting to destroy the reputation of all members of the former administration" was demanded Saturday by Patrick Hurley, Hoover's Secretary of War.

In a heated session of the senate civil service committee, Hurley said it should be ascertained whether "this is being done" or whether one of the department's officials, A. V. Dalmypie, is "just an irresponsible falsifier in charge of the 'wooden pistol' section."

Hurley reiterated his denial of statements that he had participated in a conspiracy to keep Republicans in the prohibition service.

Elephant's Last Round-Up

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.—(AP)—A Republican come-back, both nationally and in the state, was foreseen Saturday by speakers addressing the annual meeting of the Association of New York State Young Republican clubs.

Playing the New Deal, Ogden Mills, Hoover's Treasury Secretary, cast the Republican party in the role of the preserver of principles "upon which this union was founded."

He charged that the New Deal was disguising measures "constituting definite steps in a major program for government control of industry and the regimentation of the people."

With the Fulton bridge located on the greatest transcontinental highway in America, officers are pursuing the theory that it was Barrow or some desperado whose picture is equally well known who came down the road in the dead of night and killed a gate-keeper he feared would notify police.

New Relief Setup to Be Formulated

Roosevelt Asks Lump Sum Appropriation—Congress Kicks

WASHINGTON.—When the chill of next autumn strikes the unemployed and needy, there will be ready a new system of federal relief, one which will combine the best features of the PWA, last winter's CWA, and the newly launched, far-reaching housing repair and renovation campaign.

Each—except the housing campaign and that already sees the rocks of union labor wages and code prices in its economic path—has had its disappointing feature.

The president has been frankly, albeit silently, disappointed at the slow pace of the $3,300,000,000 program of Public Works, which despite all the sweat and energy of Harold Ickes, has failed to put as many unemployed on the pay roll as its sponsors 12 months ago assumed President Roosevelt would be the case.

Hence the Roosevelt demand for a lump sum appropriation from a somewhat restive congress.

The president wants the power to cut up the money as he sees fit among Public Works and relief demands and congress, or at least a vociferous group thereof, is still holding out for the power to determine the spots where each dollar will be placed. For of course you can't go back home and point with pride to the earmarking of a slice of the Treasury for your own bailiwick, how can a congressman be

Truck Driver Saw Sedan

A Kroger truck driver reported to officers at Texarkana Saturday morning that he passed over the bridge about 2:30 o'clock. He recalls passing the sedan about 500 yards west of the bridge. The sedan was headed east toward Hope.

A checkup at the bridge Saturday morning showed that the Kroger truck was the last to pass over the bridge before the killing. The driver of the truck, alone and in the dead hours of night, said he did not notice the sedan in particular. He said he saw how many were riding in the car.

Officers believe it contained the killer. Who he was, is the most baffling mystery in the annals of Hempstead county criminal records.

Williams either recognized him or made an attempt to stall off a robbery, police believe.

Sounded Alarm

Evidence showed that the gate-keeper, after being shot, sounded an alarm by pushing a small switch. The shot and alarm awakened Quinn. Bloodstains were found on the alarm switch which continued to ring until Quinn released it.

Quinn's version of the killing was that Williams was inside the toll house when shot. After being wounded, it was Quinn's opinion, that Williams went to a corner of the toll house and picked up the rifle to prevent his assailant's escape.

Following the shooting no cars passed over the bridge for nearly an hour. In the meantime Hempstead and Miller county officers had arrived and started an investigation.

Red Scott and Robert Cornelius, negroes, living near the bridge, told officers Saturday they heard a report of a pistol, but thought it was a car backfiring. They said they saw no car leave the bridge.

Funeral Sunday

Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon from the W. I. Purkins home, 61 East Second street. The funeral car had not been set Saturday afternoon. Burial will be in Rose Hill cemetery.

Surviving are, his widow; one son, Glenn Williams, Jr., 7; three daughters, Marie Antoinette Williams, 10; Sophia, 5; and Nannette Williams, five months old; his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Williams of Hope; one sister, Mrs. Edgar Brant to Hope; and one brother, John Williams of Dallas, Texas.

Mr. Williams had made his home in Hope for nearly 25 years, moving here with his parents from Dumnish, Tex.

Truck Driver Saw Sedan

A Kroger truck driver reported to officers at Texarkana Saturday morning that he passed over the bridge about 2:30 o'clock. He recalls passing the sedan about 500 yards west of the bridge. The sedan was headed east toward Hope.

A checkup at the bridge Saturday morning showed that the Kroger truck was the last to pass over the bridge before the killing. The driver of the truck, alone and in the dead hours of night, said he did not notice the sedan in particular. He said he saw how many were riding in the car.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

Darrow Isn't Doddering; He Proves That to Sinclair... Millions Pay 250,000 Per Cent Profit... Kerenky Debt Issue Spits Between U. S. and Russia.

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Old Clarence Darrow is in his 75th year. If you didn't know him well, he might sometimes impress you as doddering and senile. His mind often seems to wander.

"But if you think that's true about Darrow, you got fooled. John E. Sinclair, who got fooled that way, which seems to be the reason the National Recovery Review Board is all out of step but Mr. Sinclair.

When the board was appointed to look out for the interests of the small business man under NRA, with Darrow as chairman and Sinclair as vice-chairman, Sinclair's friends spread the word that he would be the "brains and the dynamo" of the group.

Sinclair, a handsome, dashing former Y. M. C. A. secretary and former banker who now writes financial articles, did his best to play the part.

At early Darrow press conferences, newspapermen were surprised to find him seeming to patronize the old Chicago lawyer, intercepting questions and inserting himself at times when they were interested only in Darrow.

War promptly broke out behind the scenes when Sinclair undertook to choose an executive secretary for the board. Darrow said he intended to give others, not take them, and a hot fight ensued the Darrow-Sinclair issue.

Thereafter, according to board members, Sinclair seldom attended hearings.

Sinclair, resigning, has attacked the board's report charging monopolistic features in NRA codes, and criticized procedure, on the ground that both sides weren't heard.

The board—which has other members with brains and notable records—says code authorities were asked in to every hearing and allowed to cross-examine.

(There are those who say Darrow's doddering manner is just a pose.)

250,000 Per Cent Profit
Ever hear of a firm making 250,000 per cent profit? I hadn't until a member of the Senate committee investigating the munitions industry remarked that such an instance would be revealed.

It seems there's a record that a certain company making war material earned 250 times its capitalization during the war.

Making Snoots at Russia
The present period of high-hatting in Russian-American relations, based on the Kerenky debt issue, will be ended before the new Export-Import bank is ready to finance any Russian trade. The Johnson act under which Russia is held to be a defaulted debtor hasn't affected prospects of a boom in such trade.

Insiders know that it would have been some months in any event before the bank was ready to go ahead. The Russians put on their snootiest faces when they were held defaulters and our officials are sticking their tongues out at them in return.

Threaten us with diverting her purchases elsewhere? What kind of a threat is that from a country to which our export trade dropped from $110,000,000 to $9,000,000 in three years? (The drop came as Russia completed some of her programs and our leaders became less liberal.)

Although Russia has wanted to let the debt question ride as long as possible, an eventual settlement is expected, by which she will pay a high rate of interest, which in effect will amortize whatever lump sum might officially be agreed upon.

Right now our experts are secretly studying operation of an agreement the Soviet made with International General Electric in 1927, under which a debt of $1,750,000 to I. G. E. was to be paid off by 7 per cent interest on a 4 per cent interest on credits for certain amount of goods to be bought.

The U. S. S. R. didn't buy as much as it intended, so little of the debt has been paid, but there seems to have been no violation of contract. The agreement ends this year.

Russia doesn't want to set a precedent by paying pre-revolution debts and the administration, for political reasons, doesn't dare forget those debts. But some solution will be reached, because Russia needs some of our goods, we want the trade, and both nations have a strong common interest in the movements of Japan.

College-Bound Youths Should First Have Purposeful Aim—A "Career" Course Preferred

This is the time of year to decide on the school or college Dick or Daisy is going to in the fall.

First of all, I should not go guessing about what a boy or girl needs. What is a good school for one may be poison to another. If it is going to be a struggle to put them through it, it is going to be doubly careful of choice.

Of what use is high-sight? None. Foresight is needed in this problem more than in almost any other decision concerning youth.

Higher education is distinctly divided into two classes—the academic or liberal-arts course, and the career course. The latter definitely points toward a purposeful end from its very beginning.

Both have their place. As for the general or academic course there is today a general swing to the left against it, but I feel, naturally, that it cannot be utterly neglected. That way lies deterioration. However, we cannot live on culture. Let those who can, live in the world of the intelligentsia, but let us not entice others into its mazes when they need a decidedly different equipment.

Need Preparation
Too many young people are graduated from "general" courses today who don't know how to do a thing on earth. When they are out of school they still face what they set out to get in the first place—preparation for the future.

It takes special "fitting" nowadays to get a job. We are a world of workers and we may as well face the fact and stop dreaming.

Children going to college are too often confused by the layout of mixed studies. They take a year of this and that, "major" in something they will never need and don't intend to use; children who know, too, that their parents are doing without cream to pay for.

Colleges, I feel, are failing in their methods of pointing out clear courses of study to parents and prospective students. Our college catalogues are, as a rule, regular pigs-in-pokes. We don't know what Dick or Daisy are going to get when we put them on the train.

The situation is changing, of course, but changing too slowly. Realizing the dead wood in their systems and that the letter can never substitute for the spirit, schools are coming back to reality and life. Also they are beginning to cooperate with parents. But there is still too much confusion. Parents will have to do the best they can.

All colleges should teach shorthand and typewriting. That they have not done so sooner is ridiculous.

What Should Be Taught
And though it is a far cry from shorthand to etiquette, they should, if only in off hours teach deportment and social grace. We go blundering through the years trying to guess at what to do and say and wear and how to act. By the time we're fifty then, perhaps we're ladies and gentlemen with enough "savoir faire" to poke our noses out of doors and be sure of ourselves.

Girls need to be taught housekeeping. Of course they'll all get married sometime. This need not interfere with a "career" course. Boys need to learn something real in the way of work or a profession. If not a school that does these things. When the old dried-up institutions find themselves empty they will fall in line. Life is too short to fritter away precious years in rambling.

DONNA of the BIG TOP by BEULAH POYNTER

BEGIN HERE TODAY

DONNA GABRIEL and MADELINE SIDDAU who call themselves "The Gabriel Sisters" are circus performers. Years earlier Madeline ran away from her grandmother's farm.

When Donna is injured by a fall from the trapeze Madeline arranges for her to be taken to GRANDFATHER SIDDAU's farm to recuperate. To please her partner Donna pretends to be Madeline. She falls in love with BILL SIDDAU, Madeline's cousin, and though she is ashamed of deceiving Bill and Grandfather she is afraid to tell the truth.

Menniville Madeline was a real CON DAVID, animal trainer with the circus, and although terrified of the lions and tigers takes part in the annual lion taming.

MIS. PLANTER, housekeeper on the farm, is hostile to Donna. Bill and Madeline are married. After the ceremony Mrs. Planter shows Donna a handbill announcing her husband's marriage to Con in the circus arena.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXI

The circus was en route to New Orleans and all the performers were looking forward to the week to be spent there. It was where Con usually spent the winter and he had many friends in the city. It meant a change from Pullman state rooms, since those who could afford it would move to hotels and boarding houses. New Orleans was considered the high spot of the tour, and everyone was getting costumes cleaned or making new ones for the opening there.

In Nashville Con had purchased several yards of amber colored satin and asked the wardrobe mistress to make a suit for Madeline similar to one of his own. When she went for her first fitting Madeline drew back in horror and protested that she could not wear yellow. "It's bad luck!" she wailed. "You know yellow is bad luck. Con. We'll get our notices or something else will happen!"

He laughed at her superstition. "Who cares about notices any way? I've worn a yellow suit in all the big cities and I guess I can, you can. Don't be so silly."

Every free moment now he was working with Lucy, the Bengal tigress, determined that she should be the star beast when they played New Orleans. The struggle for supremacy between man and beast was magnificent. Day after day the huge cat would be driven into the arena where Con faced her alone. She would snarl defiance and crouch as though to spring. Then, at the crack of his whip, she would back away until her gorgeous body was crushed against the bars. But Lucy would not go through the routine. Each day Con would curse and leave the cage more determined than ever to break the tigress's spirit.

Then, as though she realized that man was her master, Lucy became tractable. The day she wriggled across the sawdust at his command and lay yawning at his feet like a tame kitten he was as elated as a small boy with a new toy engine.

MADELINE hated the tigress and her hatred bled an element of jealousy. Beyond a doubt Lucy was of vastly more importance to Con than Madeline herself. Sometimes, as Madeline watched him train the beast, she almost longed to CON had already gone to the circus grounds when Madeline awoke in the morning. "His precious cats," she thought. Then, because she resented Con's leaving without calling her, she took her time at dressing and sauntered over to Canal street to look for a coffee shop.

The city was new and interesting to her and after breakfast she wandered down toward the river. The old French market was teeming with life and she stood for some time watching colored women bargaining for fish and crabs and tiny river shrimp, for mangoes, yams and red plantains. Then she moved on until she reached the docks.

Through an open doorway she could see huge bales of cotton being hauled to a steamer.

The muddy water of the Mississippi eddied and churned, beating against the mounds of sand that belted it in leash. Madeline looked down at the rotting planks under her feet. She was wondering at their strength to withstand the lurch of the waters when she heard her name spoken.

She whirled in astonishment and stared into the face of Ned Trafford. He wore a three-days' growth of beard and his eyes were bleary and bloodshot. His baby, girl, tigress would turn on him and pay him back for the brutality he had shown.

Madeline knew some day Con would ask her to handle the tigress alone. She knew she would rebel and that on that day their marriage would go on the rocks. Some times she wondered if she still loved Con or if she hated him more than she had ever loved him.

They played Bloxi the day before they went to New Orleans. Because it was cheaper to remain there over Sunday Renfro did not move the show until the following evening, but Con, anxious to get into the city, hired a car and he and Madeline motored in.

With the warm autumn breeze fanning her cheeks Madeline nestled against Con's shoulder.

"I wish we could go on and on forever, just like this," she sighed. "No show, no animals—nothing but just ourselves."

"We'd soon starve," Con answered tersely. "We're darned lucky to have a good job."

"I'll have something when Grandpa dies," she reminded him.

"That's counting chickens, but unless I'm mistaken we can pull down some real coin in vaudeville this winter. Any agent will be glad to handle an act with a woman and a tiger. By Christmas you ought to be able to manage Lucy alone."

"Yes," Madeline spoke in a tight little voice.

There was a small hotel just off Canal street that catered to "professionals." It was a rather dreary-looking place, but the air of good fellowship and the reasonable rates appealed to Con. Here he and Madeline engaged a room and slept in a real bed instead of Pullman bunks for the first time since early spring.

Fewer But Wider Waves Feature the New Windswept Coiffure

"Windswept," a by-word with fashion designers this year, has been added to the vocabularies of our leading hair stylists. As a result, the new summer coiffures have a clean-cut, windblown backward look about them that is flattering to most women.

Tiny curls still are being used on the smartest types of hair-dressing but they are tight, practical little things that stay in place instead of blowing to bits each time a fresh breeze catches you aware. There are fewer waves and wider ones. Unobtrusive jeweled clips and pins are seen on daytime coiffures as well as on the evening varieties.

Here is a new summer coiffure for the girl with bobbed locks. The hair is parted high on the right side and then waved to show one wide wave on that side and two on the other. Instead of making more waves or simply turning the ends under, the coiffure expert who originated this hair-dress arranged rows of small curls around the ears and across the back of the head. Notice how the waves sweep backward and how the curls extend upward as they go backward from the face.

A slender jeweled comb is placed on the right side of the head between the side curls and the back ones. Not only does it add a decorative note but it helps to keep the hair in place.

Let Oils Remove Cuticle, Never Use Scissors

Nature probably had a very good reason for endowing us with cuticle around our finger nails. So, for the sake of good grooming, never cut or mutilate it. And don't let your manicurist cut it either. Her finished job may look very fine when she has carefully pared away the cuticle around each nail but, next morning, after the manicuring oils have had a chance to dry into the skin, you'll have an array of rough edges where once there was smooth cuticle.

Of course, there's never any use in telling a parson not to do a certain thing unless some alternative is offered. And in the case of the cuticle there is a very definite alternative. Push it back with the towel each time after you've washed your hands. When manicuring, treat it with liquid cuticle remover or with one of the new cuticle oils.

There is one new cuticle remover cream that is easy to use and is really very effective. Twist a bit of cotton around the point of an orange stick, dip it into the preparation and work it well around the base of the cuticle and into the corners. It softens the cuticle and separates it from the nail, giving your fingers a neat, well-groomed look.

$21,714 District Refund Is Probed

Jonesboro Man Believed Indicted by Pulaski Grand Jury

LITTLE ROCK.—Following a six-hour investigation Friday of a refund of $21,714 by the state to four road districts almost three years ago, the Pulaski county grand jury was believed to have returned indictments against Urey Haden of Jonesboro.

The grand jury returned four indictments, one of which was made public, and adjourned until June 5 when it was said that a record of the refund investigation will be submitted to the court. It is not believed that other indictments will be returned in the investigation. Voluntary witnesses before the grand jury included State Comptroller Griffin Smith, who conducted the first investigation of the refund; A. C. Broadway, Little Rock, who obtained contracts with the road districts, and Haden, son-in-law of Broadway.

During the grand jury investigations, Broadway told a reporter that he wished to explain his connection with the transaction, and said his explanation was that which he gave as testimony before the grand jury.

Others who had been mentioned in the case included Wils Davis, Memphis lawyer; Claude Dutt, Rogers, former assistant attorney general; Dwight H. Blackwood, former chairman of the state Highway Commission; J. Lan Williams of Osceola, former member of the Highway Commission, and the district commissioners.

The refund was approved in an opinion written by Davis. In a hearing Tuesday, Davis testified that he had paid funds received by him as attorney for Broadway to Broadway. He offered receipts in evidence.

Broadway denied that Davis accounted to him for all the money collected from the state, and questioned authority of the receipts. He also said that Davis and others involved "talked him out of" appearing before the grand jury Tuesday and promised him that they could "explain everything" to the satisfaction of the grand jury. Believing that they had not "explained everything," Broadway said he asked to appear Friday to present his version. Efforts were made as late as 9 a. m. Friday to dissuade him, he said.

MUSIC
Music religious heat inspires, it wakes the soul and lifts it high. And wings it with sublime desires. And fits it to bespeak the Deity. God is its author, and not man: The keynote of all harmonies; he planned perfect combinations, and he made us so that we could head and understand.

With the presentation of Ross Graham, popular bass-baritone star, also in Arkansas products, at the City Auditorium on Friday evening, the Friday Music Club offered to Hope music lovers the privilege of hearing a highly meritorious program of this popular singer. His varied program consisting of songs from Handel, Schubert and Mozart were sung with true interpretive spirit. Performing with the ease and assurance of the true artist, Mr. Graham presented songs from the early English thru the German school and Aria and into the modern school. This versatile artist possessing an unusually rich bass-baritone voice of wide range charmed his audience with his variety of interpretations. His splendid diction and beautiful quality of tone gave evidences of a well controlled voice, as well as a highly cultivated one. The audience was representative, but not large. Having heard Mr. Graham several times on the radio, we were prepared to enjoy his fine voice in personal appearance, and this will certainly enable all who heard him last evening to enjoy his broadcasts in the future more. Mr. John Summers' accompaniments were a beautiful background for the soloist and he played with an ease and grace seen only on the concert stage. His solos were especially pleasing combining boldness and strength of outline with great beauty of thought. Attorney E. P. McFadden introduced Mr. Graham and Mr. Summers in his usual pleasing manner. And once again the music lovers of Hope are indebted to the Friday Music Club for a rare musical treat. We thank you.

Mrs. H. J. Drier and Miss Mae Drier of St. Louis and Mrs. J. H. Frizzell and Miss Mary Mildred Frizzell of Washington, D. C. were among the out of town visitors enjoying the Ross Graham song recital at the city hall Friday evening.

The Women's Auxiliary of St. Marks Episcopal church will meet at four o'clock Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Clyde Hill, N. Pine St.

A very enthusiastic and helpful meeting of the Hope Garden Club was held at 3:30 Friday afternoon at the home of Miss Mary Carrigan on N. Elm St. The ever charming Carrigan home was aglow with a quantity of lovely flowers, both cut and growing, giving inspiration to flowers, lovers and growers. The meeting was opened by the president Mrs. K. G. McRae and following the Lord's Prayer in unison, Mrs. McRae read a most interesting article from "Better Homes and Gardens" with discussions pertaining to each one's experience in growing some particular plant. The time for planting sweet peas was discussed and registered, also how to treat tulip bulbs while they were resting. Many complimentary expressions were given in regard to the visit to the experiment station last month and the secretary was instructed to write Mr. Ware a note of thanks and appreciation for such a wonderfully enjoyable and helpful afternoon. Featuring the business period was the decision for the club to sponsor a flower show in the fall, in which all of the flower growers in the city would be invited to exhibit.

The role that Greta Garbo portrays in her new starring picture, "Queen Christina," which comes Sunday to the Saenger theater, is similar in many respects to her own glamorous personality.

The picture was produced after ambitious preparations were outlined for its filming. Critics are unanimous in the opinion that the picture affords Garbo the greatest characterization she has yet essayed.

Doubly of interest, the production also marks the return of John Gilbert to the screen and his reunion with Garbo after a picture separation of five years.

Garbo had the story of "Queen Christina" in mind for several years and explored deeply in Stockholm archives during her recent visit to Sweden to study the character she was called upon to play.

Queen Christina has been described as a seventeenth century woman who lived a twentieth century life. On the throne she was a spectacular figure. She disdained the finery of feminism for the more mannish garb of her military rank and harassed her palace advisers through her unconventional interludes.

It is during an incognito journey that she meets a handsome Spanish envoy, portrayed by Gilbert, and permits herself to fall madly in love with him. When he finally reaches the royal court to seek diplomatic favor, he is amazed to see the girl he had met sitting on the throne.

Christina was a woman who might have lived today, so modern were her views and models of living. She was a ruler and a soldier. Not until she fell in love did she startle her court with her fondness for gorgeous clothing and jewels.

STATES EMPLOYES

do not disclose a resolution authorizing the payment of back salaries.

Testimony showed that some of the employees who received salary increases as of September 1, 1932, were required to contribute the amount of the increase for the first month to a campaign fund deficit. This contribution was made in a "painless" way by paying the employees in cash the amount they had been receiving during the preceding four months and withholding from the pay envelope the amount of the increase, several witnesses said.

James Guy Tucker, former bookkeeper of the Highway Department and now an accountant for the State Refunding Board, testified that Kleiber gave him notes filled out as to amount, but with no payee named, and with names of persons who were to be asked to sign the notes type-written at the bottom.

He said he did not understand at the time that the notes were to be paid with back salary warrants, that Kleiber was vague as to how the matter was to be handled, but said he had been instructed to tell employees they "would not lose anything" by signing the notes. He said he obtained the impression they were pay cuts to be restored September 1, 1932, and that the campaign contribution notes could be paid during the next four months.

Tucker said he asked Kleiber if Blackwood knew anything about the arrangement and that Kleiber said "No."

Henderson Beats Hope Storks 6-1

Madison Scores Only Tally on Single by Coop

ARKADELPHIA, Ark.—Davis pitched well for Henderson State Teachers College to defeat the Hope Storks 6 to 1 here Friday. The game was played in an hour and a half. Davis allowed seven scattered hits. Hope's only run was scored in the first by Madison after he had singled, advanced to second on McClendon's sacrifice and scored on Coop's single.

Henderson tied the score in the first. Harrison singled, Davis doubled. A. Hardman hit, scoring Harrison, but Davis was out at the plate. Henderson scored three times in the fourth on a single by Davis, sacrifice by A. Hardman and an error.

Harrison of Henderson furnished the feature of the game in the fifth inning. Wells singled and was forced at second by Harrison. Davis walked. A. Hardman forced Davis at second but Hardman scored while the Hope second baseman napped. N. Hardman hit a home run in the sixth.

Chevrolet's April Sales Pass 100,000

Compares With 59,193 Year Ago, and 96,893 in March

DETROIT, Mich.—For the first time in three years, sales of an automobile manufacturer for a single month topped the one hundred thousand mark. This was brought out in a statement issued by William E. Holler, general sales manager of Chevrolet Motor company, announcing retail sales of Chevrolet passenger cars and trucks during April of 100,046 units. This figure includes Canadian, export and domestic deliveries.

This compares with 59,193 units in April, 1933, and 96,893 units in March of this year, according to the statement.

Retail sales the first four months of this year totaled 281,033 as compared to 184,138 in the same period a year ago, an increase of 52 per cent.

Chevrolet's April retail sales record is considered significant in view of the fact that this company has suffered an acute car shortage, practically since the new 1934 models were introduced and only now is catching up in a small measure with the thousands of unfilled orders on its books. Retail sales were higher than for any similar period in 36 months, since April, 1931, he exact, and this tremendous increase gave a source of pride to the company.

Hannah Is Reclaimed Finest Bible Figure

A large and appreciative audience gathered at the Harrison Chapel School, Reston, to witness the first annual Mother's day program. The principal of the school expressed his sincere appreciation of the fact that Elder Robinson, nationally known lecturer and evangelist was on hand to act as critic-judge of the debate which was to determine which of the three Bible characters, Dorcas, Hannah or Ruth was the most outstanding in Biblical history.

The Rev. J. W. Moes who upheld the greatness of Hannah was unanimously declared the winner of the debate. Rev. John P. Curtright and Prof. Hubbard also took part in the discussion which was followed by an interesting Mother's day program.

Mr. and Mrs. William M. Branch of Prescott accompanied Dr. Robinson on his trip out to the school from Prescott.

beans and dried burro meat. But after the victorious armies of Carranza and Pancho Villa marched into Mexico City, they were wine and dined in some of the finest homes in the country. After the capture of the Capitol, Huerta was kicked out of Mexico and Carranza enthroned on the presidential pot.

With Carranza in power, Mexico looked forward to a reign of peace. Paul and Will Alexander, another gringo who had served with the Carranzistas, were given honorable discharges from the army. The high command gave a farewell banquet in their honor, and Carranza himself publicly thanked them for their services. The two adventurers were paid a big bonus in gold and sent back to Texas in a private car.

Scanning New Books

By BRUCE CATTION

If you are interested in the odd vagaries that human nature can exhibit under peculiar conditions—or, to get down to cases, if you like a good, straightaway story about bloodshed and destruction—you'll find "Holy Murder," by Charles Kelly and Hoffman Birney, a meaty and sustaining book.

This book is the biography of the late Porter Rockwell, and Porter Rockwell, if the name has escaped your attention, was chief of the "destroying angels," or Danites, employed in the early and turbulent days of the Mormon church to put the finger on people who had aroused the apostolic wrath.

It makes an interesting story, as tales of wholesale killers usually do. And the authors emphasize the fact that Rockwell was, through it all, a devout and godly man.

Published by Milton Balch and Co., the book is priced at $3.

Cass Gilbert Dies, Famous Architect

Designed the Woolworth Building and Arkansas State Capitol

NEW YORK—(AP)—Cass Gilbert, 74, famous architect, died Thursday in Broekenhurst, England, his office here was notified. His death was caused by an unexpected heart attack. His associates said he had been ill but a short time.

Gilbert was best known as architect of the Woolworth building in New York and of several state capitols.

Mrs. Gilbert was in London at the time of his death.

Officers of the American Academy of Arts and Letters immediately sent her a telegram of condolence, signed by Nicholas Murray Butler, president, and Robert Underwood Johnson, secretary.

Among the state capitols which Gilbert had designed were those in Minnesota, Arkansas and West Virginia. Today we are in debt $2,000,000, every line of industry is a standstill due to the new deal which is the greatest misdeal in history."

Gilbert frequently had been called in by the federal government to aid in planning government structures. Some of his most recent work had been in connection with plans for the new United States Supreme Court building in Washington, which is nearing completion on a site facing the capitol. He also had designed the Treasury annex in Washington.

Theodore Roosevelt, when president, named him chairman of the Council of Fine Arts, and President Taft appointed him to the National Commission of Fine Arts.

He was honored repeatedly with medals at expositions, and the Universities of Michigan, Oberlin College, and Middlebury College awarded him honorary degrees.

Fly Tox Opens Ad Campaign in Star

Flies Are Among Greatest Known Carriers of Filth

A fly speck is only a fly speck to many people, and to many a stage comedian it has been the source of a good "gag" when he "played a fly speck instead of a note."

However, to anyone familiar with the filthy nature of flies, a fly speck is a warning of danger. Flies develop from eggs which are laid in filth and emerge carrying a load of disease germs and filth on their body. When a fly enters the house he comes loaded with potential death, for it is well known that insect-borne diseases kill more people in this country yearly than are killed by all accidents and violent deaths combined.

"If a fly was large enough so that you could see the filth and disease germs he carries on his body," says F. O. Mohurg, President of Rex Research Corporation, "no fly would ever be allowed to stay in a home. It would be as repulsive to the average household as a man who combines his efforts to eject or kill such a menace immediately."

The egg of a fly will produce an adult within two weeks. In fact, if the sons and daughters of two flies lived and each generation were allowed to reproduce themselves one summer, the result would be over 60,000 tons of flies.

Of course flies are not allowed to reproduce in such a manner, because mankind has learned to combat them. One of the most potent destroyers of flies in the home is Fly-Tox, produced through a fellowship placed at Mellon Institute by the Rex Research Corporation. It is a liquid which is deadly to flies even when only a fine mist is sprayed in the air where the flies are found and it is harmless to people.

New Deal Played by Senator Schall

Minnesotan Praises Mellon, "Who Paid Off 11 Billions"

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Senator Schall, Republican, Minn., said in a statement Thursday "The United States needs a man like Andrew Mellon for its next president."

The former secretary of the treasury, Schall said, reduced by 11 billion dollars the "greatest national debt in history" which he said was inherited from the Wilson administration.

Mellon, he said, kept the country from going bankrupt while keeping the country on "the high road to prosperity" and constantly reducing taxes.

"When the Roosevelt dynasty passes, which it most certainly will as indicated by the election returns from Pennsylvania, this man will need a man with the financial genius of Mellon to again save it from bankruptcy."

Today we are in debt $2,000,000, every line of industry is a standstill due to the new deal which is the greatest misdeal in history."
